

EJ

Does Golang use pointers or references? Is there anything like that in the language?

Golang utilizes pointers which allows the programmer to pass along a reference. The * dereferences the pointer from its given memory address and leads to the current value held within that address. & will give you the actual memory address of the pointer.